Boyd Points To Saskatchewan Party Accomplishments in First 100 Days in Office Calvert Hands Out Report Card from the Detention Room

“That’s the first time I’ve ever had a report card from a guy who was sent to detention for four years.”

That was the response from the Saskatchewan Party’s Energy and Resources Minister Bill Boyd after NDP Leader Lorne Calvert handed out a report card on the new government’s first 100 days in office.

Boyd said the new Saskatchewan Party government has already fulfilled 15 of its major election promises and has had many other significant accomplishments in its first 100 days, including:

- Removal of the PST on used cars
- Fixed election dates
- Full coverage of the life-extending cancer drug Avastin
- Essential Services legislation
- New partnership with SUN on retention and recruitment of nurses
- $15 cap on prescriptions for children
- Creation of Enterprise Saskatchewan
- Acquired $240 in federal funding for a new clean coal project

The Saskatchewan Party today released a list of its accomplishments for the first 100 days in office (attached).

“We have 16 years of NDP mismanagement to deal with, so we’re just getting started,” Boyd said. “The important thing is – Saskatchewan people and our government are looking to the future with confidence and optimism. It’s too bad the NDP is stuck in the past.”
